● General Information

Being the most important hub that links Shanghai with the Yangtze River Delta and Zhujiang River Delta, Shanghai South Railway Station (上海南站) operates trains to some large cities such as Baotou, Chongqing, Hangzhou, Guangzhou and Nanjing as well as many second-tier cities, namely Huaihua, Jiujiang, Jinhua, Shiyao and Zhanjiang etc.

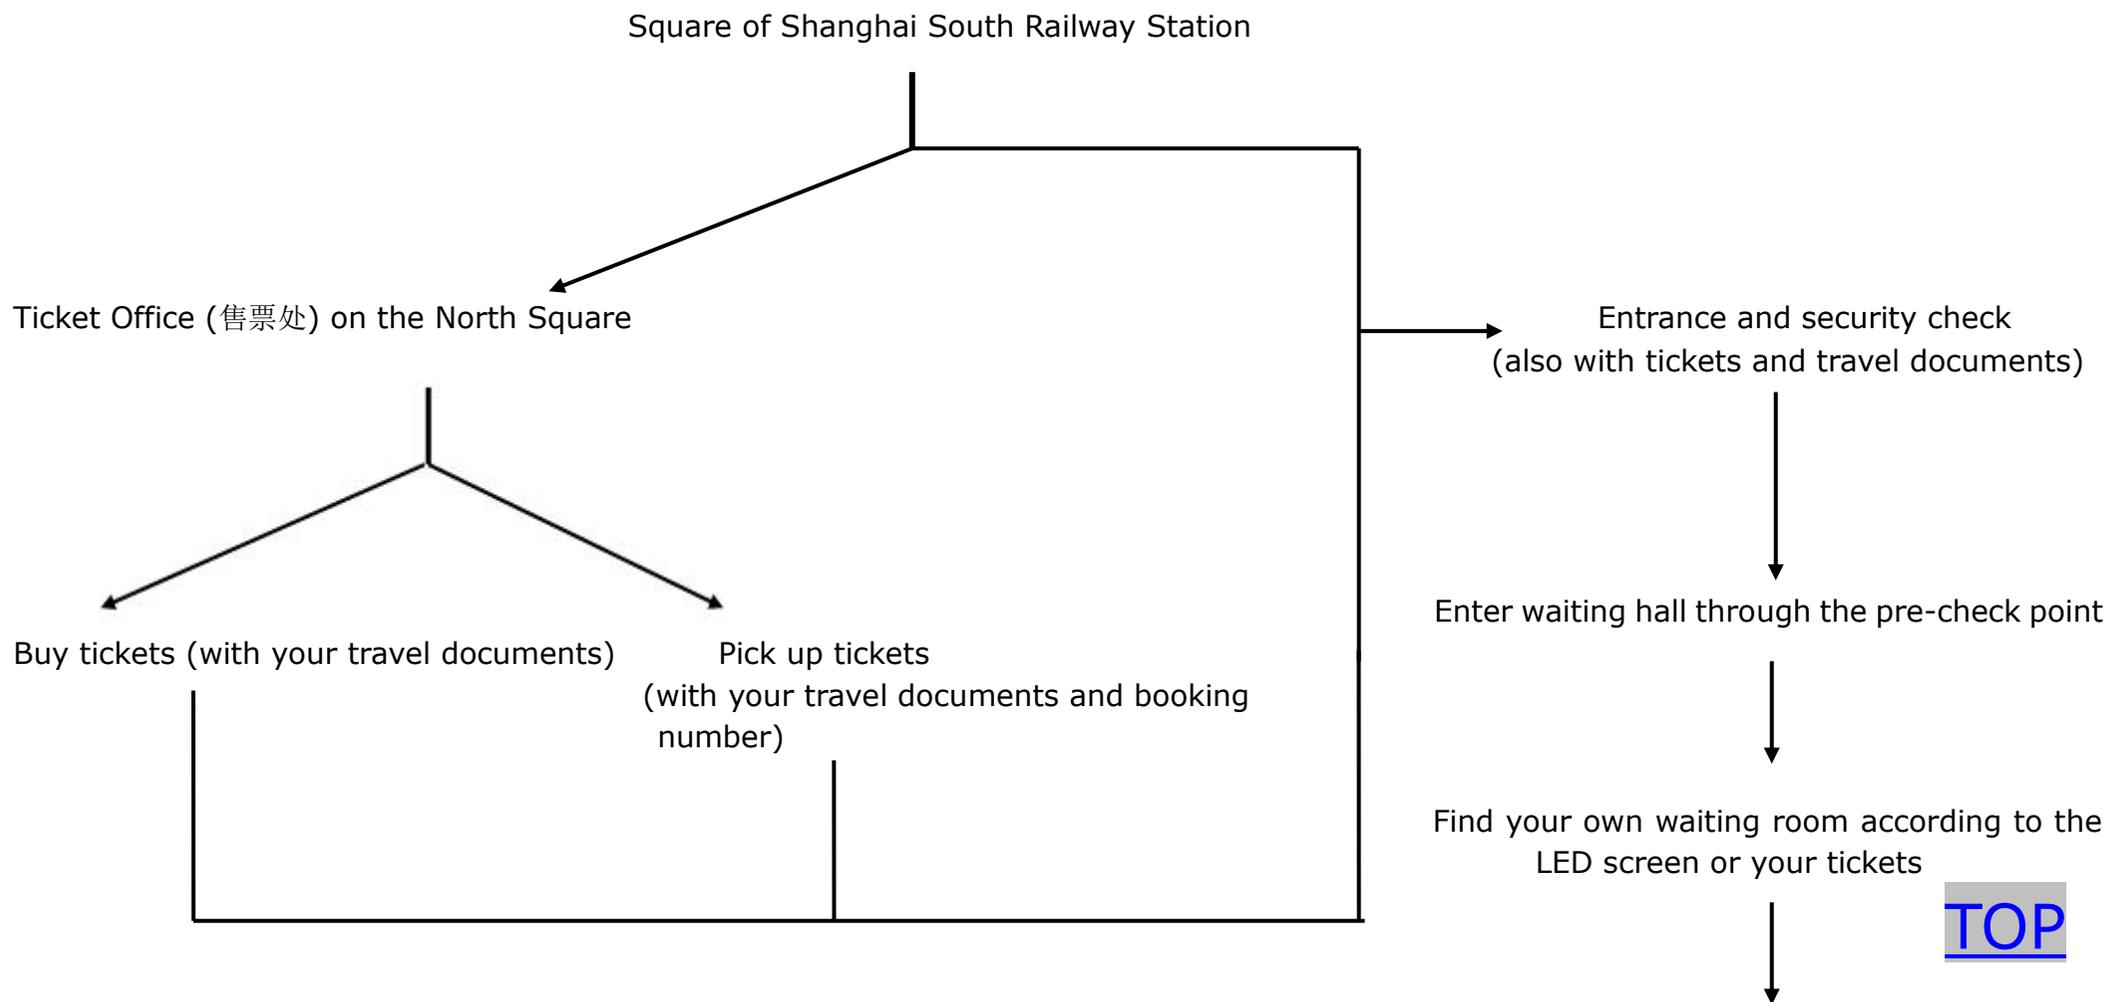

The station has three levels, including two squares. Underground it is the arrival section for trains pulling it at the station and tunnels get the passengers out of the station and access to metro lines. The ground floor is where the security check and VIP waiting section are. And then there is the floor for departures, the departure level, and there are accesses to the platforms and several waiting sections. Ticket office is on the eastern side of the North Square.

Given that the station is quite large and it might take a long journey there. It is wise to be at the station at least 2 hours ahead of your departure time, especially for those who haven't bought tickets in advance.
